Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000.

Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 15 and 25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Weaver, et al. The cited patent discloses an apparatus that comprises of an electrode in contact with the human body, the electrode having a partially conductive outer surface, the apparatus infuses the portion of the body with an agent, and the apparatus capable of electrically stimulating the treated portion of the body using a signal generator coupled to the electrode, the signal generator being operable to deliver at least a partially periodic signal to the electrode.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 16-19 and 26-40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weaver, et al., in view of Flower, Dev, et al., Lattin, et al., and Webster. The Weaver, et al., Patent does not disclose the step of measuring and recording voltage and current values. However, enhancing infusion devices with voltage/current measuring and recording means is conventional in the art as evidenced by the teachings of Flower. The Flower patent discloses an infusion device capable of measuring and recording voltage and current values. Based on the teachings of Flower, for a person of ordinary skill in the art, enhancing the apparatus disclosed by

Weaver, et al., with the capability to measure and record voltage and current values would have been considered an obvious design choice.

In relation to the specific voltage and current values disclosed in the claims in question, it is important to recognize that the human body determines these ranges. The disclosed values are selected based on safety considerations and the limitations of the human body. Therefore, it would not be unreasonable to suggest that specific voltage and current ranges would have been considered obvious design alternatives. In order to support the above conclusion, the examiner of record has included the Dev, et al., Lattin, et al., and Webster Patents to demonstrate the conventionality of the disclosed voltage and current ranges.
